Biography

Amy Koltnow is a Partner and Business Unit Leader at Kelley Kronenberg and has over 30 years of legal experience. With a focus on all aspects of business law and litigation, Amy represents a diverse clientele, ranging from individuals to large corporations, in federal and state courts, arbitration, and administrative forums.

Amy has proven herself as a trial attorney, handling complex and high-stakes bench and jury trials. Her wide-ranging expertise in different areas of litigation consistently delivers positive results for her clients, both at trial and on appeal. Additionally, Amy's legal career includes serving as outside General Counsel for a Florida property & casualty insurance company, where she oversaw statewide litigation, established claims handling protocols, and provided strategic counsel to company executives. Her leadership in this role extended to guiding panel defense counsel and implementing solution-driven approaches.

Amy holds a Bachelor of Science in Journalism & Communications from the University of Florida and earned her Juris Doctor degree from Stetson University College of Law. Her diverse background, coupled with her wealth of experience, uniquely positions her to provide strategic and effective legal counsel to her clients at Kelley Kronenberg.
