Biography

Matthew Moore is a Partner at Kelley Kronenberg, focusing his practice on general liability and third-party insurance defense matters. He brings extensive litigation experience defending insureds, insurance companies, and their agents in claims involving personal injury, property damage, and insurance coverage.

Prior to joining Kelley Kronenberg, Matthew practiced general liability litigation for over a decade, representing individuals, businesses, and insurance companies in claims involving personal injury, property damage, and insurance coverage disputes. He has tried jury and non-jury cases before arbitration panels and presented appellate oral arguments. His experience includes conducting depositions of parties and experts, negotiating settlement agreements, developing litigation strategies, and managing all phases of discovery.

Matthew also served as Solicitor for Paint Township, Somerset County, Pennsylvania, where he handled Eminent Domain proceedings and municipal loan matters, providing him with experience in public administration and government law.

Matthew earned his Bachelor of Arts from the University of Pittsburgh. He received his Juris Doctor from Widener University School of Law.
